Vintage Vault Aus partners with CheckCheck to expand independent authentication for Australian collectors

Australian vintage designer handbag retailer Vintage Vault Aus has selected CheckCheck as its independent authentication partner, adding another option for collectors seeking third-party authentication and documentation for eligible designer pieces.

Founded by Corina and Joshua Simmons, Vintage Vault Aus specialises in carefully curated vintage and designer handbags sourced predominantly from Japan.

The partnership complements VVA's existing trusted sourcing, assessment and provenance processes. CheckCheck authentication will not automatically apply to every VVA item. Instead, selected pieces may include independent authentication, while customers can also request the service for eligible purchases and pieces already in their own collections.

Building the Personal Vault

The collaboration forms part of Vintage Vault Aus' new Personal Vault concept — encouraging collectors to document and preserve the history, provenance and authentication records associated with the pieces they own.

Corina Simmons, Founder of Vintage Vault Aus, said:

"Every vintage piece has a history, and for many collectors it becomes part of their own story. Personal Vault is about helping our community document and enjoy those pieces, with independent authentication available when it adds value to their collection."

Joshua Simmons, Co-Founder of Vintage Vault Aus, said:

"Trust starts with how and where we source, careful assessment and transparency with our customers. CheckCheck adds an independent layer to that approach, giving collectors another option when they want third-party authentication and documentation for a piece. We are excited and honoured to be CheckCheck's first Business partner in Australia".

CheckCheck

"Vintage Vault Aus has built its business on careful sourcing and honesty with its customers, which made them an easy partner to work with. We're proud to give Australian collectors an independent, verifiable record for the pieces they love, whether they bought them from VVA or have owned them for years."

Perry Nguyen, CEO, CheckCheck

The collaboration also creates opportunities for Vintage Vault Aus and CheckCheck to explore sharing authentication education and industry insights with the Australian collector community.
